Court launches new program

Wyndham Law Courts has launched a new program to connect court users to vital community support.

Community Connections or barring buluk which means "many footprints" in Boonwurrung language, was launched on 28 October.

The program is as a referral and information point at Wyndham Law Courts that connects people to urgent support such as housing and family violence services, financial counselling, mental health support, youth and alcohol and other drug support.

Local agencies including Salvation Army Doorways Wyndham, Anglicare, Uniting Vic.Tas, Djirra, and Gordon Skills and Jobs Centre now offer onsite, referral-based support for court users when they need it most.

Court Network executive director Kate Cahill said that court is rarely just a legal problem and many face other tough situations, struggles and crises.

"Community Connections means the moment someone needs help the most, that help is already in the building," she said.

The program was developed by Court Services Victoria, the Magistrates' Court of Victoria, the Children's Court of Victoria, VCAT and Court Network together with local community agencies across Wyndham.
